Description

This longitudinal study of 1,200 children and their families was conducted by a research team led by Professor Kathy Sylva and Professor Alan Stein at the University of Oxford, and Dr. Penelope Leach in London. This website is intended for all those interested in the use of child care for young children, including policy makers, researchers, students, child care providers and parents. On this website you can find details about the team, information about the families who participated in the study, research findings and additional relevant information.
