Description

This submission was made by the CCAAC to the Standing Committee on Finance as part of pre-budget consultations on the 2018 federal budget. The Committee requested organizations and individuals to address the issue of Canadian productivity. Using recent information on child care's role in productivity, the brief argues that both a significant increase in federal child care allocations and a more detailed evidence-based policy framework are needed to make high quality child care accessible to all families and inclusive of all children in every part of Canada over the next decade.
