

A national child care strategy: Getting the architecture right now ^[1]

Author: National Liberal Caucus Social Policy Committee

Source: Website of John Godfrey, MP

Format: government document

Publication Date: 1 Nov 2002

AVAILABILITY

Full paper available ^[2]

Excerpt from background:

This paper provides an implementation framework for a National Child Care Strategy as outlined in the August 2002 report of the Social Policy Committee of the National Liberal Caucus. This report, "Time to decide on child poverty: Laggard or leader? The competitive requirement for a Canadian national child care strategy" identified the rationale for action on a national child care strategy.

Related link: "Architecture for national child care" by The Caledon Institute of Social Policy in pdf ^[3]

Region: Canada ^[4]

Tags: affordability ^[5]

accessibility ^[6]

federalism ^[7]

Source URL (modified on 27 Jan 2022): <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/02/11/national-child-care-strategy-getting-architecture-right-now>

Links

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/02/11/national-child-care-strategy-getting-architecture-right-now>

[2] <http://www.johngodfrey.on.ca/pages/nca-strategy.htm>

[3] <http://www.caledoninst.org/PDF/553820347.pdf////>

[4] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/7864>

[5] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/affordability>

[6] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/accessibility>

[7] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/federalism>