

Unleashing our potential: The case for further investment in the child care subsidy ^[1]

Author: Wardell-Johnson, G., & Kitchen, A. M.

Source: KPMG Australia

Format: Report

Publication Date: 1 Oct 2019

AVAILABILITY

Access report online ^[2]

Excerpted from report description

The case for further investment in the child care subsidy

Enduring norms regarding gender and work have proven harmful to our economic welfare by sidelining the careers, and limiting the potential, of women across the income spectrum. In the latest of a series of reports which aim provide ideas to cut Australia's workforce participation gap between men and women, KPMG proposes targeted amendments to the child care subsidy (CCS) to help alleviate the burden that these norms continue to have on our economic potential.

Related link: Related news article ^[3]

Region: Australia and New Zealand ^[4]

Tags: subsidy ^[5]

investment ^[6]

Source URL (modified on 27 Jan 2022): <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/19/11/unleashing-our-potential-case-further-investment-child-care>

Links

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/19/11/unleashing-our-potential-case-further-investment-child-care> ^[2]

<https://assets.kpmg/content/dam/kpmg/au/pdf/2019/case-for-further-investment-in-child-care-subsidy-october-2019.pdf> ^[3]

<https://childcarecanada.org/documents/child-care-news/19/11/au-kpmg-proposes-childcare-subsidy-overhaul-remove-penalties-working> ^[4]

<https://childcarecanada.org/category/region/australia-and-new-zealand> ^[5] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/subsidy> ^[6]

<https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/investment>