Excerpt from report: In 1997 and 1998, Ontario's Conservative government unveiled two major initiatives - municipal downloading and changes to the education funding formula (Bill 160) - that [has had] an enormous impact on the delivery of child care in the province. This study, the second of two, aims to flesh out the picture that last year's survey started developing, namely a snapshot - from the viewpoint of municipal and school board child care managers, not from the communities themselves - of the status of child care in light of recent provincial legislative changes.
