Recognizing this as an unprecedented moment in terms of political will and positive momentum, the 5th issue of the Here & Now features a critical engagement with questions about the role of the early childhood educator during these times. This issue engages with questions that consider deeply a new vision of the role of the educator in connection with the role of the pedagogist, as a professional figure who walks with educators and young children along the path of radically reconsidering what it means to live well together within the here and now of a rapidly changing world.
