

Advocating to ensure governments make affordable child care available for all is a collective responsibility ^[1]

Morna Ballantyne

17 Aug 2022

3pp

In this BRIEFing NOTE, Child Care Now's executive director Morna Ballantyne provides commentary on the rollout of the Canada-Wide Early Learning Child Care (CWELCC) program. She points out the importance of the details of implementation for the program's success, arguing that affordability for all, expansion of non-profit and public programs and addressing the widespread shortage of early childhood educators by raising wages and working conditions are all critical.

Attachment	Size
 Advocating to ensure governments make affordable child care available for all is a collective responsibility ^[2]	203.98 KB

Tags: Canada-wide agreements ^[3]

wages and working conditions ^[4]

child care expansion ^[5]

BRIEFing NOTES

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/publications/briefing-notes/22/08/advocating-ensure-governments-make-affordable-child-care-available> [2] <https://childcarecanada.org/sites/default/files/BN-Advocating-collective-responsibility.pdf> [3] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/9207> [4] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/9175> [5] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/9210>