Excerpts

Some 12,000 daycare workers are set to begin their strike action Monday morning.

As such, family daycares are slated to open half an hour later than usual, with public daycares expected to follow suit on Friday.

The Centrale des syndicats du Québec (CSQ) affiliated Fédération des intervenantes en petite enfance (FIPEQ) has 9,000 members working in family daycares, as well as 3,000 people in public daycares (CPEs).

Starting Monday, family daycares with CSQ members are expected to open half an hour later, every day of the week.

The strike mandate calls for centres to open an hour later the second week, an hour and a half later the third week and two hours later by the fourth week.
