

Anti-poverty program makes progress in United Kingdom ^[1]

Child poverty news and issues, Spring/Summer 2002

Author: Harker, Lisa

Source: National Center for Children in Poverty

Format: Periodical

Publication Date: 1 Apr 2002

AVAILABILITY

- Full article ^[2]
- Other articles from 'Child poverty news and issues' ^[2]

Excerpt from article:

Despite substantial increases in relative poverty since 1980 - an extraordinary growth by international standards whereby child poverty increased from 1:10 to 1:3 - when New Labour came to power in 1997 it had no anti-poverty strategy. Instead government officials stressed the need to tackle "social exclusion," a far wider set of challenges than income poverty.

Then, in March 1999, Tony Blair rather unexpectedly pledged to eradicate child poverty. Blair's pledge was seen as one of the most politically significant commitments of Labour's first term. Anyone who doubted his sincerity was reassured by the setting of more specific "public service agreements" to halve the child poverty rate in 10 years and reduce it by one quarter by 2004. This article examines the U.K.'s progress in reducing poverty.

Related link: For information on child poverty and Canada, see Campaign 2000. ^[3]

Region: Europe ^[4]

Tags: poverty ^[5]

mother's labour force participation ^[6]

Source URL (modified on 27 Jan 2022): <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/02/07/anti-poverty-program-makes-progress-united-kingdom>

Links

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/02/07/anti-poverty-program-makes-progress-united-kingdom> [2]

<https://www.cuimc.columbia.edu> [3] <https://campaign2000.ca/> [4] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/region/europe> [5]

<https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/poverty> [6] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/8142>