

Hundred Languages of Children ^[1]

Region: Alberta ^[2]

Details

Description: The University of Calgary is proud to honour the unique perspective that is shared by Reggio Children and the way children learn through experience - hands and minds on, with discovery and imagination. Parents, educators, child advocates and community leaders are invited to participate in the internationally renowned Reggio exhibit that recognizes the unlimited potential of children when they use the many languages they possess. The exhibit is comprised of images and text on 12 free-standing structures with interactive components, which present a narrative of possibilities grounded in the conviction that children's potential and rights are at the centre of sound education. See what is possible when you grow your perspective through an child's eyes.
