

Vulnerable children in Canada: Research insights and policy options ^[1]

Symposium, The Institute for Research on Public Policy

Author: Various

Source: The Institute for Research on Public Policy (IRPP)

Format: Speech

Publication Date: 11 Apr 2008

AVAILABILITY

- Symposium presentations ^[2]

Description:

On April 11, 2008 The Institute for Research on Public Policy (IRPP) held a symposium in Toronto on child vulnerability in the Canadian context.

Over the past several years, the well-being of children has become a key focus of public policy and an important research topic in several disciplines. The IRPP symposium examined the findings of recent research and discussed to what extent recent initiatives to support vulnerable children meet objectives.

The symposium consisted of:

SESSION 1

Fraser Mustard - Keynote speaker

Jessica Ball and Andrea Johnston - Aboriginal children

Christa Japel and Magdalena Janus - Risk factors and children in Quebec

SESSION 2

Gillian Doherty and Brenda Patterson & Canadian initiatives to assist vulnerable children

The presentations of all of the speakers and the discussions that followed are available.

Region: Canada ^[3]

Quebec ^[4]

Ontario ^[5]

Tags: aboriginal ^[6]

Source URL (modified on 27 Jan 2022): <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/08/05/vulnerable-children-canada-research-insights-and-policy>

Links

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/08/05/vulnerable-children-canada-research-insights-and-policy> ^[2]

<https://irpp.org/events/archive/20080411/index.htm> ^[3] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/7864> ^[4]

<https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/7855> ^[5] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/7856> ^[6]

<https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/aboriginal>