

Developmental health knowledge as a catalyst for healthy family policies in Canada ^[1]

Author: Saskatchewan Population Health and Evaluation Research Unit, Human Early Learning Partnership

Source: National Collaborating Centre for Healthy Public Policy

Format: Report

Publication Date: 6 Apr 2012

AVAILABILITY

Briefing note in PDF ^[2]

ABSTRACT:

Developmental science has shown the lifelong importance of early years on human learning, behaviour, and physical and mental health. Interventions that support developmental health from birth to age five contribute to establishing the foundations for a healthy life and a prosperous society.

This short document discusses how developmental health knowledge can act as a catalyst for family policies that support developmental health for all children in Canada and for the health of Canadian society more generally.

Full report coming soon.

Region: Canada ^[3]

Tags: health ^[4]

child development ^[5]

Source URL (modified on 27 Jan 2022): <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/12/06/developmental-health-knowledge-catalyst-healthy-family>

Links

[1] <https://childcarecanada.org/documents/research-policy-practice/12/06/developmental-health-knowledge-catalyst-healthy-family> ^[2]

http://www.ncchpp.ca/docs/SPHERU_DevelopmentalHealth_EN.pdf [3] <https://childcarecanada.org/taxonomy/term/7864> [4]

<https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/health> [5] <https://childcarecanada.org/category/tags/child-development>