Excerpt from press release: On April 17, 2001, four women and five unions launched a Charter Challenge of the Provincial Government's decision to deny pay equity to women in predominantly female public sector workplaces. The unions, CUPE, ONA, OPSEU, SEIU, and USWA claim that the government is perpetuating wage-based gender discrimination by failing to fund on-going pay equity adjustments to workers in predominantly female workplaces who use the "proxy" method to identify the discriminatory wage gap between themselves and male job classes. The applicants claim approximately $144 million in retroactive pay equity adjustments for approximately 100 000 workers, and a commitment to ongoing funding...The unions represent over 44,000 of the 100,000 workers in these public sector workplaces which includes nursing homes, child care centres, services for the disabled, shelters and home care agencies.
